La Corolle is an institution welcoming people with an intellectual disability, as well as a “l’Arche community”. L’Arche creates communities where the members, with and without intellectual disabilities, share daily life together. Each member receives support to grow, to attain their goals, and to contribute their gifts and abilities.

Living in a community

As a volunteer, you live and work in a house alongside people with a disability, assistants and leaders, thereby creating a "home". Supporting the educational staff, you contribute to bringing the soul of the home to life, both through your presence and your personal qualities. You participate in everyday activities, in the home and at work: meals, celebrations, housework and relaxation activities. You accompany people in their everyday routines. In short, it's like a family where everyone helps keep the house going!

Going to encounter the unexpected

Through a supportive, people-centered approach, the volunteer sets out to discover different cultures, traditions and nationalities. Life as a volunteer in L'Arche is a journey towards acceptance of difference: it is placing the weakest person at the heart of our lives and growing with him or her.

Training and taking on responsibilities

As a volunteer, you are at the heart of life in the home and are supported by a team of professionals who train you, guide you and encourage you to take on responsibilities.
